saving pets together

Why adopt a homeless pet?

- Pet overpopulation in Colorado is a huge problem. Adopting a homeless pet will help save a life.
- Animal shelters have a wide variety of pets: cats, dogs, rabbits, guinea pigs and others; young, middle-aged and mature; large and small; active and mellow.
- Rescue groups have specific breeds of dogs and cats available through a network of foster homes.
- Many shelters and rescue groups screen animals for sound health and temperament and keep histories on the strays and relinquished pets in their care—a big help in making appropriate placements.
- Homeless pets are often housetrained and well behaved, all are eager for love in lifelong homes.
- Some shelters and rescue groups provide socialization and training for pets prior to placement, as well as adoption counseling and free follow-up assistance.
- Adoption fees often include spaying or neutering, a microchip identification implant, and vaccinations.
- Free post-adoption health examinations are provided by members of the Denver Area Veterinary Medical Society.

Why spay or neuter your pet?

- By spaying/neutering, owners can help decrease the number of companion animals, especially cats, that are homeless and abandoned each year. Altered pets are also healthier and have fewer behavioral problems. For more information about spaying and neutering, including service providers, visit www.MDSAAlliance.org.

How to find your lost pet

1. Visit EVERY shelter. Act fast and check each shelter daily.
 - Many pets are found farther than 10 miles from where they were lost.
 - Personally look for your pet -- the description you give over the phone may not match someone else's description of your pet.
 - Leave a lost pet report and current photo at all shelters you visit.
2. Notify friends and neighbors that your pet is lost.
3. Contact veterinary practices in your area. Use their "Lost and Found" bulletin boards.
4. Check "found" ads and take out a "lost" ad in newspapers.
5. Check websites such as www.Craigslist.org, www.DogDetective.com, and www.PetHarbor.com.
6. Post fliers in a minimum of a 3-mile radius of where you lost your pet.
7. Don't give up! Pets can be found months after they're lost.

What you can do to safeguard your pet

- Be sure your pet wears a current rabies tag, license tag and an ID tag with your address and phone numbers.
- Make certain your address and phone numbers are on file with the veterinarian who provided your pet's most recent vaccinations.
- Contact your veterinarian to get a microchip ID for your pet. Keep your contact information current with the microchip registry.
- Spay or neuter you pet! Sterilization eliminates an animal's reproductive instincts and decreases the chances of its straying from home.
